RECOMMENDATION LETTER

Pavel Pšečuk was a student at Software Development Academy, where he took the Java from scratch course, from March 2019 to December 2019.

Over that time, I was consistently impressed with his analytical and problem solving skills as well as his dedication and hard work to constantly improve.

He is a team player, and also exhibited leadership skills. During the final project sessions, he proactively acted as the lead of his group of four people. He was able to break down big problems into smaller tasks that can be divided among team members.

Thanks to his suggestion that on the last day, every team should present their projects. We were able to achieve a higher percentage of project completion, as teams were motivated to display an elegant and working solution to the rest of the class.

Based on his skills, hard work, and talent, I am very confident to say that Pavel would be an asset to any organisation. I enthusiastically recommend him for the position of a Software Engineer in an environment where he would take his career to the next level.
